

MORE ABOUT OPEN (ONE PUBLIC EDUCATION NOW) AND THE PLAINTIFFS IN OUR CASE

- ◆ OPEN is a coalition of groups and individuals who are crowdfunding for a constitutional challenge in our courts to eliminate the public funding of Catholic Separate schools.
- ◆ Some of us have religious affiliations and some of us don't, but we all believe in one non-denominational two-language public school system. We all want to stop the estimated 1.25 to 1.6 billion the duplicate separate system currently costs us.¹
- ◆ One of the plaintiffs in our proposed court case is a young high school teacher who graduated with her B. Ed. in 2009, and has been able to obtain only supply or long-term occasional teaching. She can't qualify for a permanent position in approximately one-third of the publicly-funded teaching positions in her area because she is not Catholic. Yet the Hamilton-Wentworth Catholic District School Board receives only about 7% of its operational funding from residential property taxes; it received about 78% of its operational funding from 2011-12 to 2014-15, and all of its capital funding, from general provincial revenues.² That is, from all of us, religious and not religious, Catholic or not Catholic.
- ◆ Like other non-Catholic school teachers, she has only about half the chance of obtaining a publicly-funded teaching job as a Catholic teacher. That is because Catholics (about 1/3 of the Ontario population) can apply for 100% of publicly-funded teaching jobs. Non-Catholics (about 2/3 of the Ontario population) can only apply for 66% of publicly-funded school jobs. Some separate schools also require applicants for positions such as Educational or Library Assistants be Catholic.
- ◆ Another plaintiff is a parent of two children who go to public French schools. The closest publicly-funded French school is about a 20 minute drive away. But his children have to be bused for about 55 minutes each way because the closest publicly-funded French school is Catholic Separate and he wants his children to have a public education.
- ◆ This parent likes the teachers, and mixture of religions and backgrounds at his school, very much. But why should his children have to spend about 70 minutes more every school day being bused just because he wants them to have a public education. Under one school system, all publicly-supported French schools would be non-denominational and his children would go to the nearest school.
- ◆ OPEN is hosted on the CRIPE (Civil Rights in Public Education) website, an incorporated non-profit asking for one public non-demoninational two-language school system since 1993.
